Frond Day for the Old Soldlers as They Marched by the President-All of the Men Craned Their Necks-Was Sort of a Beverly Farewell, to Taft.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 11 -There are great many old men in Essex county to-night who are experiencing considerable difficulty in moving their necks.

The trouble has been caused by the atapt to restrain an involuntary motion cles which control the pivoting the head from switching around in the direction of a given point.

When that point is occupied by a peronage of importance sufficient to act a magnet to the eys of 1,400 old men who are trying their best to keep eyes to the front the strain is bound to be felt in some way. Hence the stiff necks to-

The number of disabled thoraxes corre sponds exactly to the number of G A. R. sterans who marched past President Taft this afternoon. And the answer that computation is the same 1,400. Not that 1,400 were all the veterans they had in Essex county. Far from it. Add about a thousand more and you are somewhere near the figure. But all veterans are not marching veterans, no matter how ch they would like to be.

It is a matter of history in Beverly now that the G.A.R. associations of this county ded to hold their annual get together and parade in this city for the express se of being reviewed by the Presint. It is no less historical that the word erst came to the veterans that Mr. Taft dn't break his summer rule of no gements even to please the old sol-

Ask any one who knows and he will tell that it has also been duly recorded that orporal Alvin A. Hanscom, who had been chief marshal of the parade, need on his bicycle one sunny morn-last month and rode down to the t cottage to see about that. Any one will tell you how he was stopped by the ret service man, who took his message to the President nevertheless, and how he consent of the President was forthcom ng that same evening.

So they began coming into Beverly in carriages and wagons and trolleys early this morning. All the way down Cabot street there was a piece of red, white and blue stuck to everything that rould take a nail. Pictures of the President, done with that ready disregard for the facial appearance of their subject which usually marks these portraits, were hung at points of vantage everywhere and one was placed directly cross from the reviewing stand in such a way that Mr. Taft must have been to look into its eyes all the while he was doing the reviewing business.

On the building in which the Executive prices are situated there was a Taft icture over the main entrance, one of a certain person in rough rider costum a place directly above a window full of fall bargains in the department store downstairs, and George Washington's likeness looked down over the per es, soap and toilet necessities displayed by a druggist. The trio was interspersed with as many flags as could be accommo-dated on the face of the building.

It was shortly before 3 o'clock that the growd began to congest in front of the reviewing stand at the steps of the City Hall. Two blocks away in either direc tion there was comparative peace in trafac circles, but it seemed that every one front of the stand it occurred to some one in authority that perhaps the parade would experience a little difficulty in wedging its way through. Then it was that the police thought of ropes. Their plan of attack seemed to be to pick out some man or woman who had a number of children hanging to him or her and to try to press back the crowd by leaning against the line at that place. Lots of the women were badly frightened, and the children scrambled out when they could and gave up the idea of seeing the President.

Beverly isn't used to crowds, and this one was too much for its police even though they were reenforced by an imported contingent from other towns.

The President walked out on the stand shortly afterward and the parade managed to get started. Beside Mr. Taft was Gov. Eben 8. Draper of Massachusetts, with some of his staff. On the platform with its border of green pine branches was everybody that is anybody in Beverly and a lot of prominent G. A. R. persons from outside.

Mr. Taft smiled and bowed whenever he caught any veteran's eye and raised his black derby with a brown gloved hand far around as the laws of nature and the echoes of a half forgotten discipline would permit.

Mr. Taft smiled and bowed whenever he caught any veteran's eye and raised his black derby with a brown gloved hand whenever the colors passed. The old soldiers weren't unreciprocal in the matter of salutes either. Some of the white haired old men raised their swords with precision at the stand as they hobbled past; some of them waved their canes at the President, and most of them just took off their hats while they were going by. But every man of them rolled his eyes as far around as the laws of nature and the echees of a half forgotten discipline would permit.

There were full bearded veterans and veterans with chin whiskers or no whiskers at all; old soldiers with an arm or a leg gone or a half bent back. It was just a regular G. A. R. parade. There were twenty-six posts represented and they came all the way from the tip of Cape Ann to the suburbs of Boston. They didn't have far to march, but it was the proudest day that Beverly has had for many a year—for twenty-six years in fact, since they marched here the last time.

It was a sort of a farewell party from the people here to Mr. Taft in anticipation of his leaving on Tuesday. This is the first time that he has made an appearance at a public function since he came here.

There is something else that Beverly is thanking Mr. Taft for to-night. They are planning to build a new Y. M. C. A. building, and the chairman of the committee wrote to the President a few says ago asking him to be present at a meeting in connection with the movement. Mr. Taft answered that he was obliged to decline the invitation, but he expressed his sympathy with the Y. M. C. A., and said that inasmuch as he was to return to Beverly next year and expected to have "something more than mere general interest in the progress of matters in the city" he wanted them to accept his check for the building fund. The amount of the check was $100.

TAFT REVIEWS G. A. R. PARADE of the President of the President.

Taft day. Thursday, is to be a holiday for the school children. Those who are handling the details of the demonstration say they are going to give the President a seplay that will always remain a vivid emembrance. President Taft's visit will add much in terest to the entertainment of the bankers from all parts of the United States, who will occupy a large part of their time while in Chicago attending the convention of the American Bankers Association next week.

TAFT PRAISES GOV. POST.

Delays Accepting His Resignation Until

He Can Find a Successor. WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 .- President Taft has delayed accepting the resignation of Regis H. Post as Governor of Porto Rico until he can find a successor. A letter written by the President to Gov. Post was made public here to-day. In it the President expressed his appreciation of Mr. Post's services. The text of the communication follows:

MY DEAR GOV. POST-The Secretary of War has forwarded to me your resignation, under date of August 30. I have appreciated much your willingness to remain as Governor until after the time has passed in which the tender of you resignation and its acceptance would be regarded as in some way affected by the controversies sted bill. I realize the amount of most excellent work that you have done in the island of Porto Rico for the benefit of the people both as Secretary and as Governor, and I desire to thank you for your patriotic and disinterested service

I am sure from personal observation and nost reliable information that in everything ou have done you have had an eye single o the interests of the Porto Rican people nd I have no doubt that a great majority of them know this. Should there be among them elements having a different view I can only assure you from my personal experience that one must, in seeking satisfaction for what he has done in striving to help a people like the Porto Ricans, depend on his own consciousness of vigorous effort of those whom he has sought with all his energy to aid. I note that you are not inistent upon the time in which your resignation must be accepted and I shall have to ask you therefore to delay for a few weeks until I can fix upon your successor and then

WOMEN FOR EDUCATION BOARD. Mrs. Mills of Upper Montelair Receives

Promises of Strong Support. MONICIAIR, N. J., Sept. 11 .- Mrs. Irving Parker Mills, the woman candidate for the board of education in upper Montclair, is receiving unexpected support and the indications are that she will defeat Elmer H. Neff, the regular Republican candidate. Democrats of Upper Montclair have unanimously indorsed Mrs. Mills's candidacy and the Woman's Club of Upper Montclair, which is composed of several hundred of the most influential in this and a good many other counties was jammed into the City Hall part of the street.

When the people had crowded off the curbs and were forming a semicircle in front off the stand it occurred to some one in authority that perhaps the parade of several hundred of the most influential women of the town, has also decided to support Mrs. Mills.

NORTH POLE MOTOR SUIT NOW

NEW GARMENT VIEWED YES-TERDAY BY LADIES TAILORS.

When Worn by Blond Model It Created Enthusiasm at Yesterday's Masor Temple Meeting-U. L. T. A. Casta Off Shackles of Paris, Vienna and London

The United Ladies Tailors Association of America assembled yesterday after-noon at the Masonio Temple in West I wenty-third street and announced that it has cast off forever the shackles on ondon, Paris and Vienna.

"Henceforth," said Grand Master Paul with a gesture indicative of all sorts of sartorial magnificence. "our customersclients I should say-will be distingushe for an elegance, exclusiveness and in-dividuality of attire of which hitherto they have not even dreamed.

"And why will this be so?" he demanded The U. L. T. A. seeing that the ques-tion was rhetorical thoughtfully refrained from replying and Mr. Paull answered it himself.

"Every suit they wear." he explained will be the product of American brains and American workmanship. Paris? Bosh! London? Faugh! Why, New York has every one of 'em beaten to a finish right now, only the women haven't sense enough to see it. It is our business to make them see it."

He paused expectantly and the U. L. T. . promptly applauded. Then several things happened all a once. Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle and Municipal Justice Alexander S. Rosenthal of Brooklyn mounted the platform. the band struck up the "Star Spangled Banner" and a small boy and a smaller girl who had been sitting on either side of a tall object covered with drapery, pulled some strings. The band kept on playing the Hon. Mr. Goldfogle and the Hon. Mr. Rosenthal smiled upon the U. L. T. A. and the U. L. T. A. gazed rapturously upon the object from which the drapery had fallen. It was a lovely lady-the kind that doesn't talk-arrayed in the latest thing in the way of a Columbia costume. It was of the princess type, with a pleated in the way of a Columbia costume. It was of the princess type, with a pleated flounce, and was composed of thirteen red and white stripes vertically arranged. Forty-six white stars on a blue ground formed the yoke, below which gleamed a golden eagle four inches from wing to wing. The hat was of white felt trimmed with a scarf of the national colors.

Mr. Goldfogle said that he honored the U. L. T. A. for its noble and patriotic attempt to place America in the proud position it ought to occupy in the world of fashion and that he was sure it would be successful. Judge Rosenthal expressed similar sentiments and again the U. L. T. A. improved the opportunity to make a demonstration of appreciation. After that it was time to get down to the real busibess of the day, and every tailor present did his level best to make the persons who weren't tailors understand what an original fellow he was.

There was Tailor Nadoolman, for instance, who ushered in a tall, slender blond young woman wearing what he described as a north pole motor suit. This suit has so many features that are so altogether different from anything ever seen before on a woman's garment that it took two great big sheets closely typed to set them forth for the lawyer who is going to get them patented. It would be impossible to mention half of them here, but a few of them may be noted briefly and inadequately:

In the first place the coat and skirt are both made of gray and black striped diagonal cloth trimmed with red cloth and black leather. The front of the coat is composed of V shaped pieces of the stripes so disposed than when the wearer sits down the lower part falls over her feet and protects them from the cold. The collar, which is in four pieces, looks very much like an ordinary sailor collar, but when the blonde pushed or pulled two or three innocent looking little red buttons the thing just raised itself right up in the air and turned into a perfectly good hood.

The U. L. T. A. exclaimed as with one voice, "Magnificent!" But there was still more nerrow, a lecturer whose name has not yet been announced will talk and a host of animated models will be seen. The exhibition will continue all this week and will close with a banquet on Sunday night at the Hotel Astor.

Miss Roche, who is the daughter of Mr. Asscula all this week of Mrs. Walter Roche of 315 West Eighty-fourth street, New York, met Dr. Pascual, was avenue, Brook and will close with a banquet on Sunday and resident for New York, a sister.

Hudson-Fulton Celebration Sales Are Now Ready

We haven't space to print anything about the Hudson-Fulton Celebration. The artists and editors of America will do the subject justice. But, as retailers, we've done very much for the people of New York and their visitors. Our achievements will have to be told serially. This is the first instalment. Continued in next Tuesday's evening papers.

Women's Tailored Dresses, $27.74

Women are loath to relinquish the one-piece street gown, although Autumn days are upon us and this smart tailored dress precisely fills the gap between linens and furs. It is made of satin rose cloth cut in the new long waisted effect, elaborately trimmed with cording and French knotting, $27.74.

Women's Tailored Suits at $29.74

These strictly Tailored Suits, made of tropical worsteds, serge and diagonal in medium gray, Oxford, navy and black are ideal models for Fall. They have just the snappy air that takes the tailored garment out of the ordinary and makes it a distinctive creation. Semi-fitted single-breasted coats, lined with satin; in lengths up to 48 inches; skirts are made with inverted and fancy pleats, $29.74

Women's Tailored Suits at $34.74

Fancy Tailored Suits, made of fine broadcloth in raisin, soft blue, artichoke, navy and black. They exactly fit the need of women who like to get away from the wholly mannish effects, while still avoiding the extremely dressy street costume. The coats are semi-fitted, ranging from medium lengths to 48 inches; velvet shawl collars, cuff effect, fancy velvet buttons, lined with messaline. The skirts have panel fronts, deep fitted yokes and inset panels of side pleats, $34.74
